THREE DEFENDANTS DISMISSED IN KEYES BRIBE TRIAL

3 REMAIN ON TRIAL IN SOUTH

Has Narrow Crash Escape

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—UP—Charge against three of the five men indicted with Al Keyes on charges of conspiracy to bribe were dismissed late today in a superior court where all have been on trial for more than two weeks. Those freed were Jack Rosenberg, Dave Getzoff and Charles Niemeyer, the three least mentioned of Keyes' co-defendants.

The dismissed rats brought the total in the case to four, Jack Benito, alias Jacob Berman, having been freed earlier to turn state's evidence. In his case the prosecution asked that the charges be dropped, but today the motion was made by defense counsel.

Only three men remain on trial—Ed Rosenberg, and Ben Getzoff and Keyes, with whom they assertedly conspired to feed Julian Petroleum corporation case defendants while he was district attorney of Los Angeles county.

The three dismissals today were expected. The state had downed its case against the men other than to bring in from time to time that they were seen in the Little Getzoff tailor shop where Keyes assertedly received money to conduct the Julian cases so that defendants would be tried.

The Louis Hagen Post of American Legion at El Cerrito will hold open installation of officers tonight at Cerrito hall.

Commander J. J. Barry and other Richmond post officers will be in charge of the installation at the newly organized post. The new charter will be presented by Dr. L. B. Martineau, ex-commander in absentia.

The hearing today was convened when W. H. Lachmund attorney for the Schaefer asked that James F. Hoey, attorney for the plaintiff, be allowed in absentia of court. Lachmund charged Hoey with threatening the Schaefer youth.

Hoey denied the charges of threatening and said he had a right to talk with the youth or any witness in the case. ## NO LESS THAN THE U. S. NAVY

It takes no less than the United States navy to hold the job hunters and the backroom boys, the job lobbyists, delegates and the great hangers of the hopefu from the precincts of a President-elect, and the engineer who stands on the bridge of the battleship Maryland on his way to South America, the Caribbean, Miami, Washington, and March 4, must be grateful for his steady ship with armor-plated sides. Through southern seas the great steel basket of gun and engine power, men and machines sliced along the Andean coast. It was an engineer's work shop after and Mr. Hoover no doubt found himself in a congenital world.

Mr. Hoover and the United States navy are now well acquainted with each other. The journey to the south gave them both that opportunity. For engineering is a primary interest for both of them and a trained mind like Mr. Hoover's free from the conventional restrictions of the military and naval mode can do much to bring the navy more and more into co-ordination with modern needs and modern methods. The navy needs Mr. Hoover. With progressive foreign policy, such as Mr. Hoover seems to favor he in turn will need the navy.

Peace and a great navy should be our foreign policy. Peace and constructive friendship toward the world will best be promoted by a strong arm. In his engineer's cloister in the cabin of the mighty battleship of the seas, Mr. Hoover no doubt found this to be true.

As a non-military instrument the navy may have many uses. One of those uses was this trip to the south. But there are other uses that Mr. Hoover will no doubt discover. His mind is constructive. He is an engineer. He may well find in the navy a most effective instrument for national policy, not merely destructive but constructive, not merely military but civil. The potential uses of this great arm of the service are far from realized.

As a retreat from a President-elect, a $40,000,000 battleship almost justifies itself. A kind of Monroe Doctrine for president-elects has been established by Hoover. "Keep off our presidents-elect," the word goes out to office seekers. The long guns and the deep plates of steel of the United States navy, no less can enforce it.—Chicago Tribune.

TROUBLE IN RUSSIA

There are numerous indications that all is not well in Soviet Russia. Stories are leaking out of the Soviet autocracy to the effect that the peasants are restive and that there are threats of a counter-revolution here and there due to high taxes and scarcity of food. The Red government officially makes light of such reports. Nevertheless it cannot be seriously denied that the Soviet structure as such is weakening at home, although strenuously keeping up its efforts abroad.

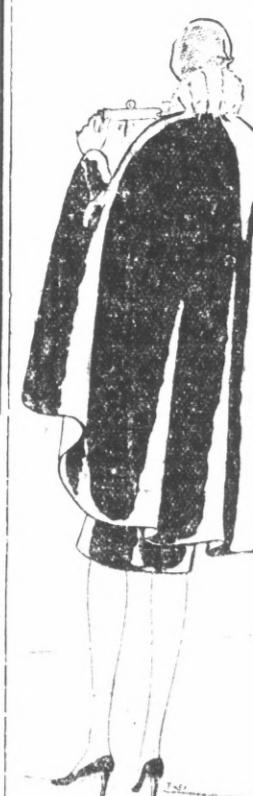

A few years ago Great Britain recognized Red Russia on the theory that it would help the Anglo-Russian trade. But events proved the theory a mistaken one. England got little if any trade benefit and the Reds immediately used their friendlier footing for the purpose of attempting to overthrow the British government. Great Britain has evidently learned a lesson. Captain Douglas Hacking, parliamentary secretary to the Overseas Trade Department recently declared "it is unwise to stand under a scaffold which is crumbling," and is quoted further by the New York Times as saying:

"Russia has today no exportable surplus of grain. Her credit is undoubtedly steadily going down, as it must do when she has fewer exports wherewith to pay for her imports. Her position must obviously grow much worse in the not distant future owing to the failure of her crops in some parts of the country and to the complete break-down of her grain-collecting policy."

AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME

Dear Miss Lane,
I am writing to you because I am having trouble with my hair. It is falling out in patches and I am afraid it will continue to fall.

Can you give me a suggestion for a velvet cap? Not for evening, especially but for a day walk. There are reasons why a cap model, either in part or in a velvet ensemble or as a separate garment. It should be lined in crepe silk, matching the velvet. The soft velvet collar might be of any tan you desire. The model uses embroidery.

Dear Miss Lane,
My hair is falling out so badly that I am worried ter fear I'll be bald in time if it doesn't stop. In this way I can cure this condition without going to an expensive hair specialist. I can't afford such treatments and would appreciate it if you could suggest home remedies.

Often falling hair is indication of a run down of a general health condition. Your hair will continue to fall.

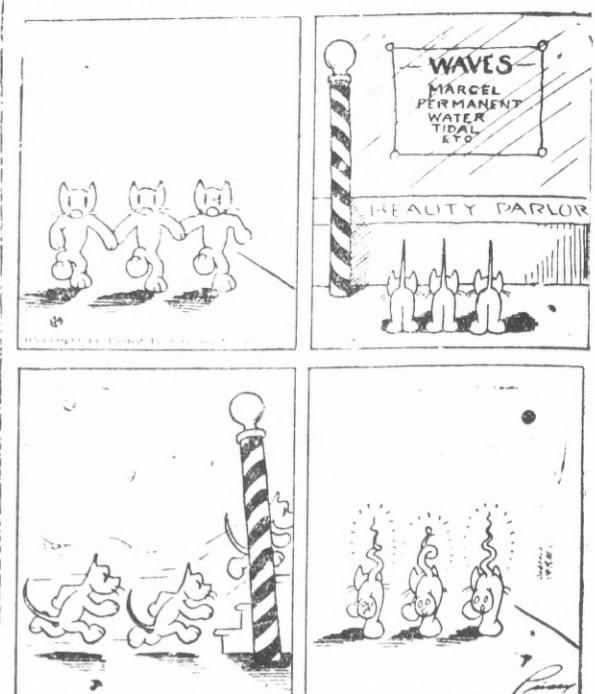

Another measure is to shampoo hair and apply dressing hair the last wash as I know of for the hair. After this, what next? An especial care when you shave is important to a healthy hair. Shave before you clean up with a piece of cotton cloth in hot olive oil white mince fat and 1/2 oz. glycerin on overcoat. Wash the hair constantly with soft water and a gentle liquid soap solution thoroughly. Dry hair and lay a bath towel with the hair to dry. In the summer sun, use hair lotion to beneficial.

Every night before you retire, comb the scalp ready with all ten fingers and manipulate until the circulation is stimulated and the scalp hardened. Then with a clean hair brush brush it vigorously for at least five minutes.

MOVING VAN USED AS HOME

VIENNA, Jan. 22.—(U.P.)—An ordinary moving van is the only home which John Bac, a coachman, has for himself, a wife, and six children. Bac recently was ejected from his former home. There being no other accommodations available he transformed his few belongings into the discarded body of a moving van.

Bac's situation is attributed by many Viennese to the peculiar laws which have prevailed in Austria since the war. When the socialists succeeded in overthrowing the Habsburgs and establishing a republic they simultaneously inaugurated an almost pure Marxian regime based on the old thesis that all property is the state. Clamoring that landlords had suffered less than the rest of the population in the deflation of the national currency and the present state loans the socialists passed laws which deprived the landlords of their rents.

Viennese who were fortunate enough to have an apartment at the end of the war are today in the peculiar fortunate position of living almost rent-free. A conservative government has long since repudiated the socialists in the national parliament, but so strong is the "pay no rent" idea at present that the regime could not be re-elected on a platform which advocated even half-rent rents. The landlords are a minority, and the tenant vote is the important thing politically.

Austrian landlords receive approximately ten cents per room per month. They can collect nothing else except the cost of cleaning and repairs. Tenants pay a slightly higher sum, but this extra money goes to the city for its municipal house building program.

During the past five years Vienna, a socialist city, has built 30,000 apartments. Unless one is an organized worker and a faithful supporter of the socialist party however, it is practically impossible to obtain one of these new dwellings.

During the same time Vienna has lost almost five percent of its population. With more houses and less inhabitants one would expect that there would be a superfluity of empty rooms, but the exact opposite is the case.

Since they pay no rent for the empty house every Viennese who has a room to let holds it for months on end in the hope that some rich foreigner will arrive and pay well for it. Hundreds, possibly thousands, of apartments in Vienna are occupied by one or two people each. Other hundreds belong to people who have moved to other cities and are held simply because it is cheaper for the tenant to pay a week's hotel bill when visiting the city.

Persons who have no dwelling must pay someone who has such several thousand dollars for the privilege of moving in and obtaining the right to pay the landlord no rent. Coachman Bac apparently doesn't have either the necessary money to buy a flat in this way nor the pull to obtain one of the socialist municipal flats.

He was the man with the exerciser.

made her laugh to think of anyone trying to rob her. And besides, real burglars didn't usually raid ice boxes. It might be a hungry tramp simply looking for food. Anyhow, she felt that she needed some kind of armament before she bearded the intruder. She wasn't at all afraid—it only seemed funny to her. She reached across the sideboard and picked up a cut glass vase.

Clutching the weapon in one hand, Fanny pushed the door open a little further. There was no light in the room, and the man had his back to her. Suddenly she reached her hand around the door, moulding. The light flamed up. Bicky, at her side, let out one short, sharp bark and made a dash.

"Here you go, Tom," Fanny commanded.

The man whirled about and faced the girl. With a sharp cry the vase dropped from her hand, and rolled unharmed over the linoleum. Fanny stared. She was facing the man she had watched one morning demonstrating a patent exerciser in a show window.

The man stared back at Fanny, speechless. At last he gulped hard. "I'm a—a burglar!" he informed her sheepishly.

Fanny giggled. "Well, I'm an Indian," she retorted. She was quite certain that no bona fide burglar would act this way, and besides, she felt as though she knew him, remembering his appearance in the leprous skin and the Roman sandals and the impression he had made on her.

The man frowned, puzzled at her remark. In truth, he wasn't a burglar, and he didn't know quite how to act under the circumstances. Besides, he was rather dumbfounded by the coldness of this girl who didn't seem to be in the least frightened at his intrusion into her kitchen.

"Well, you're a fine burglar, I must say," Fanny laughed. "Eight million people in town—and you pick me to rob. I'll say you're good. Let's join up and do a double act. I need money too."

The man slumped against the ice chest, his eyes downcast. Fanny looked at him. Yes, he was certainly the demonstrator she had seen. But now his face was covered with a stubby growth of beard; he was tired and dejected.

"All right, go ahead and call the police," he growled at last, afraid to meet the girl's gaze. "I'll eat regular in jail."

Fanny hadn't the faintest intention of calling anyone. She felt sorry for the man. He wasn't a real burglar—just hungry.

"Say, would you mind doing this?

OUR PROBLEMS DISCUSSED BY DR. BULGIN

Brother, Sister Meet Here, First Time In 27 Years

Brother and sister met here yesterday for the first time in 27 years. Mrs. Adeline Benetti of New York city arrived to visit her brother, Frank Saines, 1119 Barrett avenue, an employee of the Standard Oil company.

The two were born in New York city. They parted when the old time vim in the interest of west. They had not seen each other until yesterday.

Mrs. Benetti was accompanied here by her son Charles. Her splendid clear and lyric tenor husband is expected to arrive with Roy Gourley preceding at the piano and pipe organ. The people were also favored by a solo by Mrs. Dr. Conover of Santa Cruz, a pupil of Oscar Singer. Dr. Bulgin made many lipid remarks regarding the solidified Baptist church, saying that in all his ministry in the Northwest he has found no one to equal it. "It is an honor to the people that built it, the Baptist denomination and it is an honor and credit to the town in which it is built" he declared.

Dr. Bulgin preached last night on the subject, "Our Problems And How to Live Them," taking his text and Scripture lesson from Githens 700.

Dr. Bulgin said in part:

"God by specific direction had Gideon reduce his army down from 32,600 to 300. When God sent out to work a Miracle. He strips it of all the natural that men might see the supernatural; he stripped it of all the human, that men may see the superhuman."

"God and 300 is a match for the devil and all his hosts. If the 300 are in harmony with God in tune with the infinite."

"Now the problems that confront the church of God today are numerous, but they are not greater than they were in the days when Christianity was first born. Our greatest problems today when summed up under five real great heads; first we are money mad, second we are pleasure mad third we have humanized God, fourth we have disdained man and fifth we have minimized sin which always follows when nations forget God. Now out of these five general conditions here are some of the things that follow in the wake of such former sins.

"First the masses are not at the church, if they were and would listen to the gospel we would save the world, but they are not there to hear it, that's one of the problems to be solved. Men will eat when they are hungry but this old wicked sin cursed world pleasure goes with all its feverish ferment have no appetite for Divine things."

"Second, worldly amusements have taken the attention and they have substituted about the only time any of you folks are religious is during Lent, then you play the devil before and afterwards."

"In the third place materialistic philosophy and evolution destroying the miraculous in religion and the Bible are adopting the non-miraculous origin and progress of the universe. The baseness and greatness of God has been lost. Fourth the clubs and orders of human society have taken the time of men and women. The men have ordered the church of God to death and the women have clubbed it to death and between the two men haven't the time to be religious."

Next Dr. Bulgin touched on "backsliding as a problem" he said it was one of the most serious one of the problems, for once a man is started and turns back human pride comes in as well as old habits. California is full of people that came to this great balmy air, the land of sunshine and flowers and they crossed the Rocky mountains, the said goodbye Jesus I am going to California." Rev. Bulgin said. Continuing he said, the fifth problem that is confronting the churches today is a condemned conscience the devil has seemed to put an anesthesia on the conscience and then the seventh and most dangerous one, a substitute and false religion—man naturally wants to be right with God, when you won't take the genuine the devil gives you the false.

"California is full of substituted false religions, they are all counterfeits and misrepresent Christianity by imitating and teaching some of its principles, they substitute the garments and shall, but don't get the heart of the thing. Under all these conditions we need and must have old fashioned gospel."

He represented the remedy first the Bible emphasizes God's word, second doctrinal preaching and third an "old time revival."

Tomorrow night Dr. Bulgin will speak on "An Infidel's Gall or Unreasonable Demands Of Unbelief."
